The Asian market has been the trailblazer on blockchain technology, as it has not just been adapting this technology but was also the first to launch an ICO. Recent developments in the market as well as lack of consumer compliance and regulations in the region have created many problems for retail investors.

Unfortunately, this has resulted in the lack of awareness and adoption of cryptocurrencies in the market. Thankfully, the interest in the cryptocurrency market is still at an all-time high and growth in the market is projected to be high in 2019. In fact, the number of users using cryptocurrency has increased by 800% from 2017 to 2018. However, there is still a long way to go before any regulations are implemented in the region. What is Behind the Region's Lack of Crypto Awareness? There is a lack of awareness of cryptocurrency across the whole of Asia. As such, the lack of regulations is preventing many retailers from accepting cryptocurrencies and making transactions more complicated. Unfortunately, the cryptocurrency market has not been regulated in many places as many countries still consider it a form of gambling. This leaves many investors with no clear way of investing in the market. This means that there are a lot of aspects that retailers cannot use to draw the region's attention to cryptocurrency. As a result, retail investors have become victims of fraud as they are not able to view the many tools available to them. However, there are companies working hard to offer tools for traders, investors and consumers. Blockchain Takes Off, and What's Needed Now is Regulations Blockchain technology has become a key tool in many industries. It has revolutionised everything from banking to the entertainment industry. Over the past few years, it has become clear that the blockchain will
